

To my sons

Eternity - Immortality

At the end of the road,

But never say died.

At night, search the bright starry heavens and a small speck will twinkle and smile at you.
So never say died

In the vast green meadows

A blade of grass tossing in a gentle breeze
And a fresh fragrance will greet you and smile,
So never say died

In a cool, cool drizzle

A soft raindrop will fall silently on your face
Fresh and tenderly rolling on your cheeks,
So never say died

A vast blanket of snow flakes

Will tumble from the sky,

A certain flake, light, soft, and cold
Will fall on your lips and kiss you

So never say died.

In the eye of a hurricane,

With its madness and fury wildly thrashing and bellowing

It will stop still in its tracks to look at you and smile,

So never say died.

I'll be always there, smiling at you, my child.
So, never, never say died

Daudia Ahmad.
